Tobias Named Horse Person of the Year at SCHC Equine Expo

The South Carolina Horsemen's Council (SCHC) hosted their annual Equine Expo and Annual Business Meeting in February at the SC Equine Park-Westfall Complex in Camden, SC.

Nearly a thousand people attended the daylong event. Carol Deacon, SCHC president, said, "It was a good day for Camden, a good day for the S.C. Equine Park, and a good day for the state's equine industry." People came from all over South Carolina to enjoy the day of demonstrations, seminars, clinics, and exhibits.

As part of the special occasion, Deacon presented the Horse Person of the Year Award to Mary Ellen Tobias of Blythewood, SC, long time SCDA equine marketing specialist and SCHC advocate since its inception in 1990. For her dedication and commitment to the state's equine industry and to animal agriculture in general, she was presented a horse sculpture created by Bob Hasselle.

South Carolina Farmers Market Nutrition Program Training - only for farmers not trained in 2009

The Farmers Market Nutrition Program is designed to provide fresh, unprepared, locally grown fruits and vegetables to women, infants, and children and to senior citizens while expanding the awareness, use of, and sales at farmers markets.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture requires training for all farmers who wish to be authorized to participate in the program. The South Carolina Department of Agriculture will host a series of training sessions during the month of March for farmers who were not trained in 2009.

Sessions will be held from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the following sites:

Thursday, March 4, Compass Restaurant, U.S. Hwy. 378 and I-95, Turbeville

Tuesday, March 9, Ramage Conference Center, Columbia State Farmers Market, 1001 Bluff Rd., Columbia

Thursday, March 18, Laurens County Extension Office, 219 W. Laurens St., Laurens

South Carolina Producers Encouraged to Apply for Organic Initiative and High Tunnel Pilot Study

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) has set a sign-up deadline for the Organic Initiative and High Tunnel Pilot Study of March 12. The 2008 Farm Bill provides specific opportunities for organic producers and those transitioning to organic farming.

South Carolina farmers who are transitioning to organic or who are currently certified organic can apply to receive assistance under the Organic Initiative through the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP). Funding is available through EQIP for a High Tunnel Pilot study which will enable producers to experiment with structures (also called "hoop houses") that can help them reduce pesticide use, keep vital nutrients in the soil, extend the growing season, increase yields, and provide other benefits to growers.

A number of "core" organic conservation practices may be funded through the EQIP Organic Initiative, including cover crops, conservation crop rotation, prescribed grazing, pest management, nutrient management, and forage harvest management.

The Department of Agriculture's 'other' Mission

When I speak to groups about the services of the Department of Agriculture, I begin with what I call its 'other' mission. No less important than promoting agriculture in South Carolina, it's just that this mission is geared around consumers and not necessarily farmers.

The other day I went through airport screening to board a flight in Columbia. After looking at my I.D. and ticket, the screener said, "Isn't that the name on the gas pumps?" I answered yes, but didn't have time to tell him all that we do in Consumer Services. Folks waiting in line wouldn't have been too happy.

Like the man at the airport, most people are not aware that the South Carolina Department of Agriculture is responsible for Weights and Measures in our state. That job is the responsibility of our Consumer Services field specialists who visit over 20,000 firms every year checking the accuracy of weighing and measuring devices and the net content of packaged goods. We even check Uncle Sam at the post office.

The weights and measures inspector is perhaps the least known element of daily commerce, but that one person serves to protect buyers and sellers in every transaction that has to do with weights. To recognize this vital element of our free market society, the South Carolina Department of Agriculture celebrates Weights and Measures Week, March 1-7.

Person of the Year

Deacon said, “Mary Ellen has worked tirelessly for years for the horse industry without a lot of fanfare.” “If you are doing your job, nobody really notices you’re doing it,” she added. “Mary Ellen has been a wonderful advocate for the equine industry, and we wanted to recognize her for her advocacy.”

Hugh Weathers, Commissioner of Agriculture, said, “Mary Ellen is not only a dedicated advocate of the equine industry, but she also has a true passion for horses which shows in her enthusiasm, knowledge and expertise.”

The SCHC is a non-profit 501c3 organization whose primary purpose is to educate members, the general public, and government officials about equestrian activities and their numerous benefits. It is comprised of people with a variety of interests that include showing, trail riding, breeding, racing, driving and many other aspects of the equine industry. For more information about the SCHC or to locate a local area representative, visit www.schorsecouncil.org to locate a local area representative or call 803-328-8450.

Pilot Study

EQIP is a voluntary conservation program reauthorized in the 2008 Farm Bill. It supports production agriculture and environmental quality as compatible goals. Applications for EQIP are taken continuously throughout the year. To be considered for Fiscal Year 2010 funding under the Organic Initiative/High Tunnel Pilot Study, producers must submit applications to their local NRCS office by March 12.

Applicants who are currently certified organic will need to include their organic system plan (OSP) reviewed by a USDA accredited organic certifier when applying for financial assistance in the Organic Initiative under EQIP. Applicants who are transitioning to organic will need to submit a self-certification form to the NRCS acknowledging that they agree to develop and implement conservation practices for certified organic production that are consistent with an organic system plan. The self-certification form may be obtained at time of application from any NRCS Service Center.

Some participants are eligible to receive a higher payment rate including limited resource farmers, beginning farmers, and socially disadvantaged groups. For more information visit www.nrcs.usda.gov/programs/SLB Farmer/.

To sign up or learn more about EQIP assistance for the organic initiative or the high tunnel pilot project, contact your local NRCS office, or visit www.sc.nrcs.usda.gov. Contact Erica Westbrook, State Resource Conservationist, SC NRCS erica.westbrook@sc.usda.gov or 803-765-5685.

Program Training

The same information will be provided at each training session. Farmers are urged to arrive early in order to sign-in at the door to be given credit for attending. Those who do not sign-in at the door will be required to attend another session. Those who do not participate in a session will not be allowed to accept SC Farmers Market Nutrition Program checks of WIC cash value vouchers this year.

Farmers will be provided updated information from the 2010 Guidebook for Farmers and will be expected to complete an application/agreement that includes a crop plan for this year. There will be an opportunity during each session for farmers to ask questions regarding the SC Farmers Market Nutrition Program.

For more information about the SC Farmers Market Nutrition Program training sessions, contact Fred Broughton, SC Department of Agriculture Small Farms Program Coordinator, 803-734-2210 or Yolanda Kennedy, SC Department of Health and Environmental Control, 800-922-4406.

Our inspectors use highly precise equipment to inspect the accuracy of all types of scales, gasoline dispensers, fuel oil meters, LP gas meters, and the net contents of packages. Our role is to protect consumers, businesses, and manufacturers of this state from short measure and fraud.

The right arm of the Weights and Measures Program are the specialists in the Metrology Laboratory. Five years ago when I became Commissioner, I thought the lab had something to do with the weather - until I re-checked the spelling. Metrology folks keep the inspectors on the right track by calibrating the equipment used in checking the accuracy of weighing and measuring devices. They have some very very precise instruments and frankly, they get a little nervous when I stop in for a visit.

The National Institute of Standards and Technology recognizes the Department's Metrology Laboratory as an Echelon I laboratory, the highest precision level recognized by NIST. The laboratory provides precision calibrations for business, industry and government agencies. Calibrations are available from 1 milligram to 500 kilograms and .001 pound to 1000 pounds. Now you know why they get nervous.

In addition to inspecting weighing and measuring devices, the Department of Agriculture also registers repairpersons of commercial weighing and measuring devices. Registered repairpersons of commercial devices are authorized to put new weighing and measuring commercial devices into service and repaired devices back into service. Standards used by these persons are required to be calibrated by a state standards lab at least every two years.

Today, quantities are determined in all business sectors using the latest advancements in technology. Gasoline stations and supermarkets employ state-of-the-art weighing and measuring equipment. Railway cars and highway vehicles are weighed "in-motion." Coal is weighed while moving rapidly across belt-conveyor scales. Regulatory officials are challenged with the development of performance specifications and laboratory testing of evolving fuel sources such as ethanol and biodiesel. Regardless of the technology in place, inspectors are well trained to secure accuracy and equity.

The calculated benefits that consumers receive for a very small investment in Weights and Measures inspection programs far outweigh the costs. The National Conference on Weights and Measures, a professional nonprofit association of state and local weights and measures officials, manufacturers, retailers and consumers, reports that the cost of a regulatory presence is less than $1 per person per year.

What else can you get for a dollar a year?
Look for the South Carolina Department of Agriculture sticker on everything from cash registers to gas pumps. The number punched indicates the date of the last inspection. To report a problem, call the number on the sticker, 803-737-9690.

If you want to learn more about how our state's Weights and Measures program measures up, visit www.agriculture.sc.gov and scroll down to Weights and Measures under Programs and Services. You can even find a list of definitions of weights and measures - including everything from bale to baker's dozen.

Hugh E. Weathers, Commissioner

SC Cattlemen tag still available

The South Carolina Cattlemen's Association and the Cattlemen's Foundation continue to promote a specialty license plate geared toward anyone who wants to show their pride in South Carolina agriculture.

The tag is available from the South Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles to anyone in the state of South Carolina and costs $30 in addition to regular plate fees for vehicles. All of the money raised goes to the South Carolina Cattlemen's Foundation to enhance the scholarship program, as well as to be able to help fund research relating to the cattle industry with funds generated from the tags sale.

For more information please contact your local South Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles office or check online at www.scdmvonline.com.
